2.3 The Jumano

4th Grade Social Studies · Video: Chapter 3: The Jumano Tribe (Statewide Outreach Center)

Name: _____ Date: _____

Watch the video and fill in the blanks as you go.

Adapting to a Dry Land

Native Americans in the Puebloan region adapted to an environment that was very _____.

There were very few trees, and _____ were their main source of water.

They learned to build their homes using _____.

Adobe is a building material made from _____, grass, dirt, and water.

When adobe dries, it becomes very _____ and strong.

Where the Jumano Lived

The Jumano were farmers, much like the _____.

The Jumano lived in the southwestern part of Texas, near the _____.

"Pueblo" is the Spanish word for _____.

The Spanish found many villages with adobe homes, so they called the people there _____ Indians.

Farming and Trade

The Jumano depended on rivers and streams to water their crops.

Both men and _____ worked as farmers.

They grew crops such as beans, squash, and _____.

They traded for things they could not easily get, such as buffalo _____, meat, shells, and cloth.

Jumano men often had to travel long _____ to trade.

To help carry supplies, they trained _____ to pull a travois.

A travois is made by tying _____ together. It is dragged along the ground like a sled.

Leaders and Visitors

The Jumano had one main leader, called a _____.

Some tribes also had a _____.

The Jumano held ceremonies for their crops and to celebrate _____ time.

The Jumano were known as a _____ tribe.

They welcomed visitors and even helped lost strangers find their way home.

Vocabulary

Word	Meaning
adobe	a building material made from mud, grass, dirt, and water that dries hard
pueblo	the Spanish word for village
travois	a frame of tied sticks that is dragged to carry supplies
barter	to trade by exchanging goods

Key Takeaways

• The Jumano lived in a dry land near the Rio Grande and built homes of adobe.

• The Jumano were farmers and traders who traveled far to trade.

• By the mid-1700s, the Jumano no longer lived as a separate group. Historians think their people joined other tribes.